

New Book (03)

The Hyacinth

1934

The fairy asked the Hyacinth
If she could have a flower,
To make herself a dainty frock
And a bell for the fairy tower.

The Hyacinth most kindly said,
“For flowers you must pay.”
The fay then promised to return
And pay for them next day.

Back came the fairy with a gift
The following afternoon,
And gave to the little Hyacinth
A lovely sweet perfume.